Jordin Sparks was showing off her sporty style – and her favourite team – at the NFL Inaugural Hall Of Fashion event launch on Tuesday.

The singer looked sexy in a black pencil skirt and an Arizona Cardinals jersey which she proudly pointed to on the New York City red carpet.

Jordin went for a super coordinated look, also sporting a pair of black heeled sandals and lipstick in the team's deep red.

With the NFL currently under fire for domestic violence and child abuse scandals regarding two of its players, it was clearly hoping to detract attention from the controversies with the first ever Hall Of Fashion event.

Jordin, 24, was supporting designer Philip Bloch, but the Phoenix native is also a self-described 'NFL fanatic' and was encouraging her Twitter followers to show off their 'fan style'.

While Erin Heatherton tweeted that she was supporting the Chicago Bears, she decided to go for a glamorous look instead of dressing in sportswear.

The Victoria's Secret Angel, who hails from the village of Skokie near the Windy City, wore a black turtleneck dress with a white panel down one side.

Erin, 25, also wore thin black sandals and lots of red lipstick, and carried a red miniature box clutch.

The stunning blonde model – who previously dated Leonardo DiCaprio – is loved up with Australian DJ Felix Bloxsom, who she has been dating for a year.

Meanwhile American Idol alum Jordin has been dating Jason Derulo for over two years, and he even wrote the song Marry Me for her.

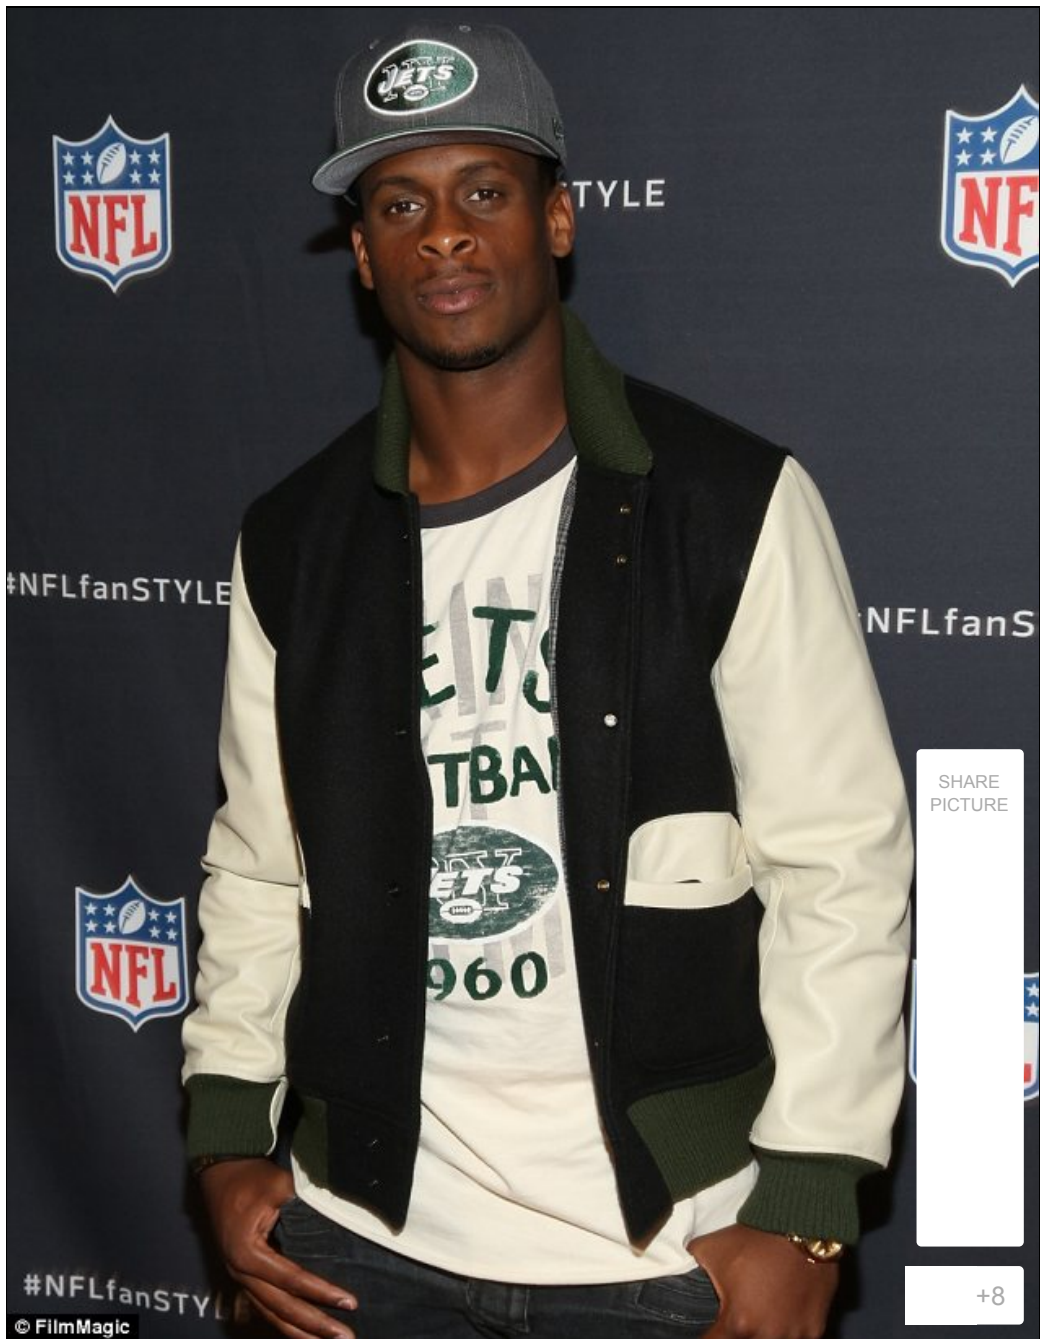

Model Carol Alt, 53, was also at the launch in an all-black outfit of skinny trousers, boots and a long-sleeved top with a leopard print panel.

But it wasn't only gorgeous women who were there – New York Jets player Geno Smith was in attendance too.
