Leanne Marshall created a beautiful and enchanting runway show for her New York Fashion Week display. The former “Project Runway” winner was one of several designers kicking off day one of the biannual event on Thursday, Sept. 10. And Marshall’s Summer/Spring 2016 collection definitely didn’t disappoint.

Overall, Marshall showcased over 40 outfits, each one just as gorgeous as the next. The 34-year-old designer, who’s been a staple at New York Fashion Week and fashion shows around the world since 2008, is known for her feminine, elegant and light flowing pieces. Marshall stuck to her signature style throughout her NYFW 2015 show, wowing the audience with black silk dresses with side cutouts and a total showstopper: a deep green silk organza gown with draping and intricate foliage details.

Following the fashion show, Marshall shared a behind-the-scenes photo thanking her team and models for all their hard work. "We did it! Thank you to every single amazing being that helped me with this. I'm nothing without all of you," she wrote. Marshall did have some support from a few fellow designers. Sitting front row was designer and actor Phillip Bloch and TV personality Jill Zarin.
